

LINE HANDLER

Abstract of the Disclosure

A method receives incoming messages from data feed lines. The incoming messages have data on associated market events. The method includes receiving incoming messages from a feed line, translating the received incoming messages into market event messages having a common format, and publishing a portion of the translated messages on a network. Each market event message includes data on a market event and time data. The network has multiple devices capable of receiving the translated messages.

382722-1